

TERMS OF USE

This website www.langlegal.be (the “website”) is operated as a natural individual by Eric-Gérald Lang (CBE nr 0816.373.972). The use of the website is solely authorised subject to the present terms of use, which the user is deemed having checked and accepted.

1. Scope: The content available on (or through) the website is of a general nature and for informative purposes only. No right, service or legal advice whatsoever can be derived from the use of the site and its contents. The mere sending and/or receiving of information through the site is free of charges and of any commitment from both sides, and does not imply that the user is or become a client of Lang Legal.

2. Disclaimer: Lang Legal does not accept liability for any damage which may arise directly or indirectly from the use of the website and does not offer any guarantees about the correctness, completeness or updated character of its contents. Despite his efforts, it may appear not to be the case of (all or part of) these contents. Any information sent by email or with the contact forms through the website is not otherwise secured and is not performed on a confidential basis.

3. Property rights : This website is protected by copyrights. No intellectual property rights regarding the website or its content is transferred to any user. Except with prior approval, users may however reproduce certain parts of the site for non-commercial use only.

4. Governing laws/jurisdiction: Any dispute on the use of the website and/or these terms of use is governed by Belgian law and are subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the courts of Brussels acting in French.
